In a perfect world, each person would know the right career for him, and all the required elements would fall into place. Realistically, choosing a career can prove daunting. Anything from fear to lack of awareness can toss up a roadblock on the path to a career decision.

The more you know about the pitfalls of choosing a career, the more prepared you'll be when faced with the process.

- The Perfect Fit : Some people mistakenly believe that only one perfect career exists for each individual. Instead of seeking one work path that seems like a perfect fit, therefore, it's important to investigate a variety of options.
- Fear of Failure : The element of the unknown often rears its head in a search for the right career choice. A person may fear that he/she won't like the career once committed to it. They may fear that she won't be good at it. Ways to allay these and similar fears include thoroughly knowing oneself.
- Current Obligations : Current obligations can cause a person to overlook certain careers because he thinks he won't be able to properly integrate these two aspects of his life.

- Lack of Awareness : A lack of awareness about skills, values and interests can cause problems when trying to choose a career. While this is a typical problem for people newly entering or reentering the workforce, it can affect anyone who is not aware about what he wants from a career. Career aptitude Assessments and career counselling can help a person determine the type of careers he should pursue suitable to his personality.
- Educational Barriers : Certain careers require job seekers to attain specific levels or types of education. If the career a person is truly interested in requires advanced education, but he needs to start working now, the situation can create indecisiveness about choosing another career in which he has little or no interest. So, one can pursue the advanced education he needs to make his dream career a reality.

You are the final judge of what you are like and in the end, knowing yourself is what's important.

People who know who they are, deep inside, feel less pressure to act in ways that don't match their own values.

It affirms who I am.

To help you know who you are, what you like doing, what occupations are you likely to succeed in and be happy, your lifestyle choices, your inborn multiple intelligences and relative strengths of your brain lobes, we have two different options.
